Responsible Citizenship Summary for Department Heads

Definition

Responsible Citizenship at CCP is comprised of nine skills in three broad areas: Self Management, Integrity, and Understanding Diverse Perspectives. The focus, particularly of the first two areas, is on the student's relationship with the College. Less emphasis is placed on the relationship between the student and the outside world (see Appendix A for details). Responsible Citizenship is not associated with a particular course, but rather, is expected to be gained in a student's time at the College, from in class and extracurricular activities.

At CCP, students will be able to:

- Take responsibility through good class attendance, punctuality, and preparation (Responsibility)
- Demonstrate positive interpersonal skills, such as cooperation, speaking and acting respectfully to faculty and fellow students, and courtesy in the classroom and college community (Interpersonal)
- 3. Prioritize the tasks of the class and completes them in a timely manner, as well as manages competing obligations and multiple roles (Prioritize)
- 4. Complete one's own work and avoids any type of academic dishonesty including cheating or plagiarism (Honesty)
- 5. Be proactive about learning, as evidenced by taking ownership of one's education, having pride in one's work, seeking help when needed, and striving for excellence (Proactive)
- 6. Act respectfully when receiving feedback from others and reflects a professional attitude and disposition both in the classroom and college community (Respectful)
- 7. Acknowledge what another person is communicating in a respectful manner (Acknowledge)
- 8. Demonstrate an understanding of how different experiences shape our values, opinions, and beliefs (Understanding)
- 9. Be considerate of how his/her responses will be interpreted by others (Considerate)

Assessment History

Responsible Citizenship was examined in 2010. One hundred forty five students were assessed by faculty using the Responsible Citizenship Rubrics (Appendix A) in twelve sections of the Freshman Orientation Seminar (FOS). Students also performed two self assessments using a separate survey (in weeks 7 and 14) created by the subcommittee of the General Education Assessment group focused on Responsible Citizenship (Appendix B).

Overall, 70% of students were at or above competency in Responsible Citizenship. Students were scored highest on acknowledging what another person was saying respectfully (79%), completing work honestly (79%), acting respectfully when receiving feedback (74%), and being considerate of how others may interpret their responses (74%). The lowest scores were in self management areas: prioritizing tasks (52%) and taking responsibility (54%). Also low was being proactive about learning (51%). (See Table 1.)

Table 1: Means and % Competent by Skill

		C
		Competent
Skills	Mean	or Better
Responsibility	2.48	54%
Interpersonal	2.90	65%
Prioritize	2.48	52%
Honesty	3.26	79%
Proactive	2.51	51%
Respectful	3.12	74%
Acknowledge	3.13	79%
Understanding	2.97	72%
Considerate	3.09	74%
Overall	2.88	70%

Although students were also asked to self assess their skills, there was little variance in the data and the number of the respondents was low (n = 38) to draw any important conclusions. Students scored themselves higher than faculty on seven of the nine skills.

As a result of the assessment, one of the recommendations was to tweak the wording of some of the skills (Appendix C) and to assess the competency again in 5 years (2015).

Outstanding Questions

1. Is this a broad enough definition for Responsible Citizenship?

The focus at CCP is generally on measurements within the school; does that correlate to external, post-collegiate measures of citizenship? (Voting, service, etc) There are some ways to capture this information through government databases and involvement in extracurriculars.

2. How important is it for students to have a voice in their assessment process?

Although few students participated, many of the faculty involved in the previous assessment were very supportive of students performing a self assessment. It may be a model of "assessment as intervention," whereby students are helped in their development through the self reflection engendered by an assessment.

3. Should we also be examining seniors?

This survey looked only at first year students; we may want to examine growth over time.
